How to Keep Your Child Engaged This Summer

Adapted from Lowenstein & Associates

Avoid “Summer Slide” by Keeping Kids Engaged in Learning All Summer Long

Something is waiting for your kids this summer, and most parents don't even know it's out there. It's called "summer slide," and it's what happens when young minds sit idle for three months. As parents approach the summer break, most are thinking about the family vacation, the kid's camp, swimming lessons, and how to juggle it all. What they might not be focusing on is how much educational ground their kids will lose during the three-month break from school, particularly when it comes to reading.

Reading Is Fundamental (RIF), the nation's oldest and largest children's and family literacy organization, says there is no better time than this summer to begin helping kids bridge the gap. Motivating children to read throughout the year is essential to building lifelong readers and reading is the doorway to all other learning. According to the 2004 report from Johns Hopkins Center for Summer Learning, a conservative estimate of lost instructional time was approximately two months or roughly 22% of the school year (one month spent re-teaching and one month not spent on new instruction). “Summer slide” affects millions of children each year in this country-but it doesn't have to.

Reading is the doorway to all other learning

linking kinship caregivers

With these few easy steps, parents and caregivers can keep their kids from losing ground in their academic progress:

1. Combine activities with books. Encourage kids to read about summer activities.
2. Visit the library. Help your child get a library card.
3. Lead by example. Show your kids the fun you have reading!
4. Talk it up. Talk with your kids about what you read.
5. Relax the rules for summer. Let summer be a time when children can read what, when, and how they please.
6. Have plenty of reading materials on hand like storybooks, newspapers, magazines, and informational texts.
7. Use books to break the boredom. Get books that teach kids how to make or do something.
8. Read aloud with kids. Take your children to see a local storyteller or, better yet, be one yourself!

The Dayton Metro Library is a great resource for your child during the summer. Most of the branches have free activities going on for children and summer reading clubs for all ages. Find a branch nearest you and begin your reading!

Bike Helmet Use Could Prevent 45,000 Head Injuries to Kids

Contributed by: Jessica Saunders, Children's Medical Center
Warm weather has arrived and families are gearing up to enjoy the outdoors on their bikes.

While inflating the tires and checking the brakes are important - a helmet is essential. Dayton Children's and Safe Kids Greater Dayton urge parents, caregivers and children to use their helmet each time they ride their bike - no matter how long or short the distance traveled.

Each year, approximately 135 children die from bicycle-related injuries and more than 267,000 nonfatal bicycle injuries occur. Helmets can reduce the risk of severe brain injuries by 88 percent; however, only 15 to 25 percent of children 14 and younger usually wear a bicycle helmet.

In 2008, 261 children were treated in The Regional Pediatric Trauma and Emergency Center at Dayton Children's for injuries from bike crashes.

In Dayton, children younger than age 13 are required by law to wear a helmet at all times while riding a bicycle.

"A bike helmet is essential safety gear," says Jessica Saunders, injury prevention coordinator at Dayton Children's and Safe Kids Greater Dayton coordinator. "Helmets could prevent an estimated 75 percent of fatal head injuries and up to 45,000 head injuries to children who ride bikes each year."

Sometimes children mistakenly believe that they don't need to wear helmets when they're riding near home. Unfortunately, about 53 percent of vehicle-related bike deaths to children happen on minor roads and residential streets. "Teach kids to obey traffic signs and the rules of the road. Kids should not ride without supervision until they have demonstrated that they always follow the rules," says Saunders.

A helmet should also be labeled to indicate that it meets the standards set by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

"As long as it's certified, let kids pick out their own helmets," Saunders says. "If they think a helmet looks cool, they'll be more likely to wear it when an adult is not around."

Top tips to get your child to wear his/her helmet:

1. Establish the helmet habit early when your child gets his or her first bike. If they learn to wear helmets whenever they ride, it will become a habit for a lifetime. If possible, start them off with helmets while they are still on tricycles to establish the link between wheeled vehicles, pavement and helmets. It's never too late, however, to get your children into helmets.
2. Let them pick the helmet out. If they make the decision, they are more likely to buy into the idea.
3. Wear one yourself. Be a role model for your kids; they learn best by watching you. Put on your helmet whenever you ride your bike. Show them that you hold yourself and your brains in high esteem.
4. Encourage their friends to wear helmets. Peer pressure can be used in a positive way if several families in the neighborhood start making helmet use a regular habit at the same time. If no other kid in your neighborhood uses a helmet, your job will be a lot harder.
5. Talk to children about why you want them to protect their heads. Let kids know that you love them and value them and their intelligence.
6. Give your child a short course in bike safety. Placing the helmet in the context of a safety program shows that it is not just an arbitrary rule and helps underscore why you are requiring it. It is not enough to put a helmet on the child and send them off without some basic safety instruction.
7. Point out when watching sports events how many professional athletes use helmets. Football and hockey players, baseball batters and race car drivers all wear helmets.
8. Take your child to a bicycle race. Bicycle racers are required to use helmets in the US, the Tour de France and almost everywhere. They will see--usually close up--really cool riders, competing in a hotly contested event, all of them using helmets.

Ohio Kinship Permanency Incentive (KPI) Program at Risk

According to the Ohio Department of Jobs and Family Services (ODJFS), in January of 2004, there were 63,166 children living with relative caregivers or legal custodians, and receiving Child Only TANF grants - cash assistance of $245/ month, plus about $77 for each additional sibling in the household. Public Children Services Agencies have custody each day of nearly 6,000 children who are placed in relative homes.

Effective January 2006, the Ohio Legislature voted to provide additional fiscal support from Ohio's TANF funds in the amount of $10 million per year to qualifying kinship families. Called the Kinship Permanency Incentive program or KPI, the program is designed to promote a permanent commitment by the kinship caregiver by becoming a guardian and custodian over a minor child who would otherwise be unsafe or at risk of harm if the child remained in his/her own home. The Kinship Permanency Incentive program provides time-limited incentive payments to families caring for their kin. Eligible families receive an initial payment of $1,000 per child, followed by $500 per child every six months thereafter for a total of 36 months ($3,500 limit).

9. Reward your kids for wearing helmets. Praise them; give them a special treat or privilege when they wear helmets without having to be told.

10. Don't let them ride their bikes unless they wear their helmets. Be consistent. If you allow your children to ride occasionally without their helmets, they will not believe your messages about the importance of wearing them. Tell them they have to find another way to play, or must walk or take a bus to get somewhere if they don't want to use helmets.

11. Plan bicycle outings together when all family members wear their helmets. Ride with a local bike club if you can, where all riders will probably be wearing helmets and many of them, like the racers, are accomplished riders.

Remember: Crashes causing head injuries can occur on sidewalks, driveways, bike paths and parks as well as streets. You and your children cannot predict when a situation will occur that will end in a fall from a bike. It is important to wear a helmet whenever riding even if it's just down the street or on a bike trail. ✦

Resources for Kettering Residents

Automated Telephone Call

Kettering residents may be eligible for a telephone response system that can call a person up to two times per day. This service is open to persons of all ages who have no one that checks in on them on a regular basis and is FREE to all Kettering residents regardless of income. How does it work? It is an automated system. The individual schedules to receive a call at a designated time every day. They must respond to it by pressing the number 1 if they are o.k. or the number 9 if they need assistance. If they press 9, an officer will be dispatched immediately. If they do not answer the phone, it will try back 2 additional times. If they do not answer by the third try, a loved one or neighbor is called and they receive 3 calls as well. If the loved one or neighbor does not respond, an officer will be dispatched. This system will not replace a life line system as participants only get checked on and are not monitored other than through the telephone call. This system requires that the person be able to hear on the phone and press the appropriate numbers. There is an assessment of needs completed by Vickie Carraher (Senior Service Coordinator - City of Kettering) to determine if any other program may be of benefit to residents. Call Vickie Carraher for more information, 937-296-3356. †

Low Volume Trash Service

All Kettering residents 65 and over with an annual income of $30,000 or less are eligible for low volume trash service. This service will cost the senior only $9.00 a quarter. Service is limited to one large can and unlimited recycling. Seniors can also have large items removed up to one time a week. The program will begin July 1, 2009. Seniors would receive their discounted bill in June for July, August and September. For an interview for trash service the senior coordinator can come to the home for homebound individuals. To register for this service, call Vickie Carraher at 937-296-3356 or go to Engineers Department in Government Center at 3600 Shroyer Road, Dayton, Ohio 45429. If you are homebound, Vickie is willing to do a home visit to verify income. †

New Benefits Bank Site

The Kettering Connection in Town and Country shopping center is now a Benefits Bank site. Benefits Bank is a web-based program that will allow a counselor to gather the information and assist the individual in determining their eligibility for benefits such as health care coverage, home energy assistance, childcare subsidies, and food stamps. The counselor will print up the forms as well as complete a list of all items needed when turning in an application. This assessment takes up to 2 hours to get through but is very comprehensive. Individuals are required to make an appointment to avoid long lines. Call Vickie Carraher at 937-296-3356 to make an appointment. †

Kinship Stories

Conversations with Grandmothers

I would like to express my gratitude for your help and guidance with the Kinship Care program. This program makes the difference sometimes in a child going to foster care and being with a relative. Sometimes a stepping-stone is all we need.

In my case, it was 4 children who were previously afraid to go out of their inner circle and now are in sports, choir, graduation and going to the Navy in July.

My oldest grandson Art was made to raise his brothers and would just stay to himself when I first got them. I had to keep assuring him that's not his job anymore. The others were so afraid they would have to go back to their mother they would hardly leave the house.

Now with the help of the Kinship I am able to get clothes and shoes every 6 months which they so need. They are also able to participate in all their activities and I am able to fill the freezer for a couple months. I am so grateful to be able to help build their self-esteem. I couldn't have done this without the help of the Kinship Care program.

Everyone I interacted with was so kind, caring and empathetic. It was hard to come and ask for help when I didn't know where to turn. But all of you did it effortlessly.

Again thank you †

The initial eligibility requirements for KPI were very strict (for example, the child had to be adjudicated by juvenile court as being abused, neglected, dependent or unruly) and few families qualified, so in 2007, ODJFS removed some of the more restrictive requirements and raised income eligibility from 200 percent of the federal poverty guidelines to 300 percent.

This program is now providing incentives/fiscal support to over 6,000 children being raised by grandparents and other kin caregivers. With a small amount of funding, the KPI program helps caregivers accept custody of their relative children, thus avoiding more traumatic and costly placement in non-related foster homes. In its current effort to balance the state biennial budget, however, the Ohio Legislature cut the Kinship Permanency Incentive and many other kinship-related line items. Through the efforts of the Public Children Services Association of Ohio (PCSAO) and other concerned organizations in the state, the Ohio House restored $5 million (of the original $10 million/year) of KPI funding to the budget. Efforts will continue to keep this and other kinship state support in the budget in the coming months. ✦
