During a public health project in India, fourth-year M.D./M.P.H. student Luke Rothermel (bottom, second from right) visited the village of Banchari with friends from the Sukhdev Raj Soin Hospital for the national holiday of Holi. Also known as the “Festival of Colors,” this springtime celebration lasts several days, opens with large public bonfires, and features a tradition of blanketing crowds of revelers with dyed powder or water. For more on Luke and his experiences, see page 40.
